TRANSLATION NOTES

The title B. Ichi can be translated as "B. One," which, when read all together in English, becomes "bone."

Pg. 36
Listintelligence
On the Intelligence Division Office's sign, the writing in bold correctly spells out "Intelligence Division Office." However, the first character in the word "Intelligence" (the "chou" in chouhou) is crossed out and replaced with a made-up character which appears to be a combination of the "chou" character and a character meaning "listen" (which can also be pronounced "chou").

Pg. 37
Assi
Assi's name is a shortening of the word "assistant."

Pg. 45
"Mana" garbage instead of "Nama" (raw) garbage!
The word for "raw garbage" in Japanese is namagomi. Flip the "nama" (raw) part around and you get "Mana."

Biker Jacket
The jacket Tool is wearing is typical of the kind of long jacket worn by biker gangs in Japan.

Pg. 55
Sailtery
This should say "solitary" (as in "solitary confinement"), but it is intentionally misspelled because the original Japanese is misspelled. The word for "solitary" in Japanese is dokubou, written with the characters for "single" and "room/cell." In this case, however, the first character ("doku") is replaced with the character meaning "poison," which can also be pronounced as "doku."

Pg. 63
Demon Sakrifises
This should say "Demon Sacrifices," but again it is intentionally misspelled because the original Japanese is misspelled. The word for "sacrifice" in Japanese is ikenie. It is normally spelled with the characters meaning "living" and "sacrifice," but in this case, it is written with the characters for "lake" and "picture."

Pg. 72
King
The writing on Shotaro's forehead says oushou, the word for the "king" piece in shogi.

Pg. 78
Anmitsu
Anmitsu is a Japanese dessert made with jelly, azuki bean paste, and a variety of fruit, served with a sweet syrup.

Pg. 87
Tensai
In Japanese, the words for "natural disasters" and "genius" are pronounced the same — tensai. They are, however, written with different characters.

Pg. 88
773
Notice that Yohei's ring has 773 written on it. This can be pronounced nanami, which is Yohei's family name.

Pg. 90
Den / Jaa
This sign contains a pun. The "den" part means "electricity," and the "jaa" part is meant to represent the sound of a shock. Put together, denjaa is the Japanese approximation of the English word "danger," which is written at the bottom of the sign.

Pg. 95
Rage Agei's Machine
Here it is perfectly clear that Dr. Agei's name is indeed a reference to the American rock band Rage Against the Machine.

Pg. 105
Configuration/Resignation
In Japanese, the words for "land surface/topography" and "letter of resignation" are pronounced the same — jihyou. But when written, their first characters are different. In Zuno's letter, he originally wrote the version of jihyou which means "land surface/topography," but then he crossed out the first character and wrote in the right character to make "letter of resignation."

Pg. 121
Hiraishin
Normally, hiraishin means "lightning rod." But in this case, the first character is different. Instead of the correct character meaning "evade, avoid," it's written with a character meaning "negative, mistake, injustice."

Pg. 122
Shitajiki
Shitajiki would usually mean "pencil board," a thin piece of hard material such as plastic which is placed under the piece of paper you're writing on (so as not to ruin the other pieces of paper). But in this case, it is written with the characters for "below" and "magnetism."

Pg. 123
Hiraiken
This word is written with the characters for "negative, mistake, injustice," "lightning," and "fist."

Pg. 137
Tanuki
A tanuki is an animal native to Japan, sometimes called a "raccoon dog" in English (although it's neither a raccoon nor a true dog). It looks something like a large raccoon, including a black "mask" over the eyes, which is what Mana is referring to when she mentions Dr. Agei's "Tanuki face."

Pg. 183
Sinbuya
Sinbuya is a play on Shibuya, an area of Tokyo with many stores and clubs that is a center of Japan's youth culture.

Pg. 185
Hachiko
Hachiko is the name of a dog famous in Japan for its loyalty to its master. Every day, it would walk to the station with its master when he went to work, and then would be waiting at the station when he came home from work. One day, its master died while away, but the dog still faithfully waited at the station at the same time each day for its master to come home. It continued to do this for the rest of its life. There is now a statue of Hachiko in Shibuya, and it is a popular spot for people to meet up.
